FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Unity Care's CFO Wins the 2010 Silicon Valley CFO of the Year Award

San Jose, Calif., (November 19, 2010) Unity Care's Chief Financial Officer (CFO), Terry Boyle, has won the highly contested Silicon Valley/San Jose Business Journal's 2010 CFO of the Year Award in the small non-profit category for agencies with a budget of less than $25 million.

Terry joined Unity Care in August of 2009, and in just over one year, he has dramatically turned the agency's finances around. He is also responsible for overseeing the agency's Development, Human Resources, and IT departments. As a result of his excellent leadership and financial expertise, Terry has successfully streamlined the agency's accounting methods, refocused deployment of resources, increased the agency's revenue and increased cash reserves.

Terry brought with him over 25 years of experience in the accounting field, where he has held leadership positions with non-profit organizations and private companies. Prior to Unity Care, he was the CFO/COO for the Tech Museum of Innovation in San Jose. Terry has an MBA from California State University and is a Certified Public Accountant.

André Chapman, President and CEO said, "In less than two years, Terry has managed to turn the agency's finances around. CFO's are often unsung heroes and he deserves to be recognized for his remarkable accomplishments. For years, Unity Care like many other non-profits had struggled to operate while at a deficit, and the economic recession that hit in 2008 made it an even more challenging climate for non-profits. I am sincerely proud to have Terry as a member of the Unity Care Executive Leadership Team and I applaud him for ensuring the agency's financial sustainability for years to come."

The Silicon Valley/San Jose Business Journal hosts the CFO of the Year awards annually. This year's event honored the top CFO's in each of six award categories on Thursday, November 18, 2010 at the Computer History Museum, located at 1401 N. Shoreline Blvd. in Mountain View from 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.
